The End!

The Girls Group Outreach project of VOX is a collaboration with Angela's House, a safehouse for young women who are survivors. For eight weeks each Saturday morning, girls from VOX Teen Communications worked with young women from Angela's House, writing and having fun. Our goal was to express ourselves through writing and art. What resulted, in part, is this collection of writing and photography. What you can't see in these pages are the conversations about self-esteem, love, relationships and power. Our goal is also to help each girl reach a personal epiphany, feeling better about herself and having fun with peers in the process.
